About the Book The outstanding feature of the remarkable Conversations with Eckermann is this, that the compilation furnishes an altogether unique record of the working of Goethe's mature mind. For Goethe's age at the period when the Conversations begin is seventy-three, and eighty-two when they end. John Peter Eckermann published his work in 1836. In 1848 appeared an additional portion. Eckermann, born at Winsen, in Hanover, was the son of a woollen draper. He received an excellent education, and studied art, under Ramber, in Hanover, but soon became enamoured of poetry through the influence of Korner and of Goethe. He became the intimate friend of Goethe, and lived with him for several years. In describing the friendship, Eckermann...
