Nearly 62 per cent of the cases were native-born individuals and families, nearly 75 per cent of the men afforded relief were married at the time, and over 50 per cent included families where there were three or more children. According to the reports of the New York Board of Charities for 1910 nearly one-third of the 328,000 persons receiving relief had been rendered destitute because of sickness. Of 5,000 destitute families coming under the observation of the Charity Organization Society in New York City, three-fourths were found to be destitute wholly or partly on account of sickness. (E. T. Devine: Misery and Its Causes, p. 204.) Thus a vicious circle of economic disadvantages due to sickness and conditions causing sickness is established. Overwork and worry, insanitary housing and community surroundings, and lack of nutritious food are frequent causes of sickness. Sickness, in turn, reduces the family's economic status by entailing extra expenses and loss of wages, weakens efficiency, and demoralizes the worker. There can be little doubt that such a circle throws more wage earners on the scrap heap than accidents, increases the necessity for charity giving, burdens the state with delinquents, and helps to fill the army of casual laborers with derelict recruits. III. RESPONSIBILITY FOR CONDITIONS CAUSING DISEASE. With the relation of working and living conditions to the health of wage earners and their families so manifest, it is pertinent to point out that three groups...
